 Items stolen and recovered:
 -(2) 7 piece ratchet wrench-$49.98 each-$99.96 total
 Details:
 An Officer was dispatched to the listed location for a retail fraud in custody. They completed a loss prevention report and it states: The suspect came into the store at 1106hrs and quickly selected 2 craftsman wrenches. He then placed the items on the seat part of the cart and exited the tool world. He then headed to OSLG and began messing with the packaging of the item. At this time, the Officer called APSM to help me keep surveillance of the suspect. As the Officer was on the phone when he re-entered the building and headed to the lumber department. While in the lumber department he wrapped his coat around the wrenches he previously selected and headed back to OSLG. They received some help from the OSLG department supervisor. He then made his way back into the store and stood at the lumber register. He was rung up at the pro desk. He did pay for the other items in his basket but never offered payment for the wrenches he placed under his coat. After keeping surveillance of the suspect, they seen him passing all points of purchase and failing to offer any form of payment for the merchandise in his coat. He was stopped in the lumber vestibule. He did comply and went to the AP office until APPD arrived. The Officer made the location and cited him for retail fraud. He signed the trespassing form from Lowe's and was advised to not come back. LP report placed in DB box.

ON THE SIDELINE:

THREE SISTERS, ONE BATHROOM, HAIR DRYERS AND MOM

By Don Richter
drichter101@comcast.net

Happy Mother's Day to all the Moms out there in the world.

Last weekend I traveled to my original hometown to visit with my Mom. Three years ago, my sisters and I helped Mom sell the house in which she lived for 60 years. The house, where Mom raised her children and enjoyed a beautiful marriage with my Dad, still was in excellent shape structurally inside and outside. Mom and Dad took great care of that house throughout the decades. The only odd thing about the house where I grew up was it only had one bathroom.

Yes, you read that right — one bathroom. That's probably unheard of in today's homes. Granted, Mom and Dad had proper plumbing installed for a basement bathroom before moving into the house, but never developed the project further. I shake my head and chuckle now thinking back to my growing up years with one bathroom and three older sisters.

I think it'll come as no surprise to anyone that I spent half my childhood pounding on our bathroom door pleading with my sisters to "hurry up" and get out. I think it'll also come as no surprise that my pleading and demanding to "hurry up" had no effect whatsoever on whichever sister was on the other side of the bathroom door.

My bedroom growing up was directly across the hall from the bathroom. I often tell people I never needed an alarm clock growing up because I was awakened every morning for school by the jet-engine-like sound of multiple hair dryers blowing at full throttle across the hall. I can still hear the cacophony of numerous hair clips, bobby pins, make-up bottles and hair brushes slamming down and/or dropping onto the bathroom counter like a never-ending "rain storm" of noise. I would quietly wait in my room in my bed until the commotion across the hall simmered down before slowly opening my door to see if the coast was clear.

Once it was "safe" I would cross the hall and enter the bathroom only to be met with the overwhelming and overpowering smell of hairspray and perfume. Even today the smell of hairspray can make me gag. If I would've lit a match, I think the whole house would've exploded.

Looking back, it's funny because there was a certain order to mornings and bathroom use at my boyhood home. I guess, with one bathroom, there had to be. Mom, who started working when I was 10 and in the fourth-grade, got up first, used the bathroom, got ready and then made breakfast for my Dad. Dad would use the bathroom next, get ready, eat breakfast and be gone and out the door before I ever got up. Following Dad were my three sisters and their distinctive, but seemingly never-ending, sounds of "getting ready" for school. Being the youngest in the family, I was always last to use the bathroom.

By the time I walked into the bathroom it looked like a bomb had gone off. It looked like a post-apocalyptic scene with wet towels, damp rugs, crumpled up washcloths, random discarded clothes, shoes, bracelets, earrings, hair clips and other jewelry and make-up paraphernalia strewn all over the countertop and floor. By this time, Mom would be giving me a kiss goodbye and reminding me to eat breakfast and to take my lunch (which she had already made) and lock the front door before leaving for school. Next my sisters, one by one, would leave for school, with the last one usually shouting, "See ya, loser," before slamming the front door shut.

Ahhh, what beautiful memories.

I'm kidding about the "loser" part — sort of. It was more often than not a simple, "Bye, remember to lock the door." Then a slam. Then quiet. Finally, glorious, serene, peace and quiet. Even at 10-years-old I appreciated the value of quiet.

Growing up with one bathroom and three annoying, bathroom-hogging-sisters, it was tough on a young boy. I did become quite good at picking the bathroom door lock with scissors or a random hair clip or bobby pin my sisters would leave lying around in their room. Hey, a guys gotta do what a guys gotta do in certain situations, am I right?

I look back at those days now and marvel at how Mom handled it all. With only one bathroom in a small, suburban home and six people needing to use it every weekday morning, Mom had to be part drill sergeant, part traffic cop and part social worker every morning.

And she did it all with such grace and ease. Or at least that's how it looked to me. We all survived. We all made it to school and jobs on time every morning. Somehow it always worked.

I love my Mom.
I miss my Dad.
I tolerate my sisters.

I'm kidding, I love my sisters — for now, I guess. I'm kidding again. My sisters and I have always been close. We're thick as thieves.

But Mom made it all work.

Every day.
Every morning.

Mom was, and still is, the heart of our family. She set the tone in our house every day. And it was a tone built on love, respect and a lot of humor and laughter.

Happy Mother's Day to all Moms out there.

If it hasn't been said to you yet, I'll say it — you're all amazing.

Thank you to all Moms.

Especially my 88-years-young Mom. I love you.

A one bathroom house?

I wouldn't have had it any other way...

Organizers of the Motor City Irish Fest recently unveiled the music lineup for its 2023 festival. One of the premier Irish-themed events in Southeast Michigan, the festival takes place June 9 – 11, 2023 on the grounds of the Greenmead Historical Park in Livonia, Mich. As the biggest draw of the festival, the music lineup plays a key role in the event's popularity. This year's festival headliners include, from Ireland, Derek Warfield and the Young Wolfe Tones, and from Foxborough, Mass, The Gobshites.

"It's the music that really awakens the Irish spirit," said Kevin Murphy, co-chairman of the festival. "The music is a pathway that allows us to celebrate the Irish culture and heritage, which is very strong in the Detroit and Southeast Michigan area. We are very fortunate to have Derek Warfield here from Ireland to help share that heritage.

Murphy highlighted other regional and local bands that are always crowd favorites that will be returning to the festival, such as Blackthorn, Brother Crowe, McSpillin,

Last game for our 10U Huskies was a WIN! What an end to the season for these kids - many who are playing their first season of hockey ever. Every game, they've played a team who has been together much longer, with more seasoned players, and have battled to the very end with everything they have. With an incredible season record of 3-1-4, we'll quote our goalie Cooper: "We are the Comeback Kids!!!" Great, great job boys & girls!!

ALLEN PARK HUSKIES 8U WHITE TEAM LAST GAME OF SPRING SEASON

From: Allen Park Hockey Club

Last game of the 2023 Spring Season for the 8U Allen Park Huskies - White team was held Saturday May 6! The amount of hard work these kids have put in this season has shown at every game. For most, it's their very first season on a team.

You wouldn't know it from how fast these players have caught on, worked hard to improve, and shown up for each other every day they play. We hope this season was unforgettable - and most of all, fun! Great job!!! We can't wait to see what you do in the fall.

JESSICA TREMONTI NAMED 2023 ASSISTANT COACH OF THE YEAR

From: Allen Park
Cheerleading

CCCAM is proud to announce our 2023 Assistant Coach of the Year, Jessica Tremonti from Allen Park!

Jessica has been the Assistant Coach at AP since 2003 when Julie Goodwin took over the competitive program. Together they have been to 19 consecutive State Finals and have earned five State Championships, 5 Runner-Up titles, 5 District titles, 5 Regional titles and several league titles. In addition to coaching, Jessica has also been a MHSAA Official for the last 15 years.

In her nomination, Head Coach of Allen Park, Julie Goodwin said, "Jessica is an amazing coach with the most creative mind I have ever seen. She is a mentor, role model and caregiver to many young ladies. She represents our sport with class, sportsmanship, and yes even with her little quirky ways that we all love. The athletes adore her and respect her and she is extremely dedicated to our program. She leads by example and she teaches life lessons they can carry with them forever. She shares her knowledge of the sport with new coaches and always makes herself available to help others."

Congratulations Jessica on this recognition!
