Business Spotlight: The Glow Bar

By Aimee Bingham

I have sworn off tans since my skin bubbled after about 20 minutes in the tropical sun on a cruise in the Bahamas. My Irish/English ancestors made bronzing like a bottle of oil from the 80s impossible. When getting a spray tan became an option, I secretly feared turning a hideous shade of orange. I'd rather be a shocking shade of white than an ugly unnatural orange. When I spotted a small business in Chelsea supporting other small business owners in Chelsea; I decided to face my fears and give it a try. I made an appointment with the Glow Bar for a spray tan.

I received directions to the location and some instructions for prepping for the appointment to get the best outcome. I shaved and exfoliated before the appointment. I did not put anything on my skin after my show-

Balanced Living by Brio Living Services Offers Holistic Approach to Health

Chelsea Retirement Community Pilots Enhanced Wellness Experience for Residents

From: Lisa French

Brio Living Services announces the pilot of a new branded health and wellness program at Chelsea Retirement Community (CRC), its flagship campus in Chelsea, Michigan. Balanced Living by Brio Living Services will kick off in January 2024 for older adults across CRC's continuum of care, including Independent Living, Assisted Living and Memory Care, and short- and long-term skilled care.

Balanced Living is designed with The Seven Dimensions of Wellness as its guide, according to Tylene Costello, Director of Lifestyle and Health at CRC. "Balanced Living is a holistic approach that will integrate each of these seven facets, including Environmental, Intellectual, Vocational, Emotional, Spiritual, Physical, and Social wellness. Studies show that if one dimension is neglected for too long, it can adversely affect a person's health. Through Balanced Living, we aim to provide opportunities for our residents to explore all dimensions of wellness to contribute to their own quality of life."

The program's mission statement is: Balanced Living bridges connections for a service model that elevates and creates holistic resident experiences. We foster a collaborative approach to plan our lifestyle offerings with our expert team invested in resident well-being. By breaking down the silos, Balanced Living cultivates life enriching programs and experiences!

Brio Living Services partners with National Institute for Fitness and Sport (NIFS) and employs NIFS fitness experts, including Costello, in many of Brio's residential senior living communities. "As our fitness management partner, we will utilize NIFS' resources and expertise to bring this framework to CRC," said Costello. "Assuming we see positive results from this pilot at CRC, we will expand Balanced Living to our other Brio communities as well."

"At Brio we believe the field of aging services must grow beyond the traditional 'activities calendar' and embrace the desire of residents to experience meaningful engagement, holistic wellness, and lifelong learning," said Brio's Chief of Residential Services, Nicole Maag. "Our vision at Brio is 'a world in which all are empowered to age well.' Balanced Living furthers this vision by creating environments and fostering opportunities for residents to grow, experience, and engage!"

"Through the Balanced Living program, NIFS team members will collaborate with our Life Enrichment and Spiritual Life team members, as well as Dining," said Kathy Russell, Executive Director for CRC, The Pines, and The Cedars of Dexter communities. "Together, we will engage our residents with a variety of activities across the seven dimensions and create a cohesive wellness experience for our residents."

Russell added, "The social and spiritual part of wellness is also a key component of Balanced Living and will set CRC apart from wellness programs at many other communities."

Cristina Manly, CRC's Director of Sales, agreed. "The program not only enriches the overall wellness of our residents, but it also provides the ability to be engaged through social connections. You feel part of a community, a family, which encompasses who we are as an organization and a community."

CRC's state-of-the-art McMullen Wellness Center, completed in 2019, is a showcase for a variety of physical health activities for CRC residents, including swimming and water aerobics, fitness classes, a walking track, and NuStep machines. The McMullen Wellness Center receives an average of between 1,400 and 1,600 resident visits per month.

Balanced Living will kick off in January 2024 at CRC. Each month will have its own theme that team members across the campus can plug into as they plan their activities. "January's theme is Fresh Start in Balanced Living," said Costello. "Each area of campus will have a kick-off party. Some of the activities will include an emotional wellness presentation, blood pressure checks, and a spa day with massages."

Said Russell, "We are excited about ways that Balanced Living will enhance overall wellness for residents across our campus. Residents can expect to see a similar wellness experience across our continuum of care. This is important, especially as our residents require more care and move to different care areas of our campus, that they see familiar faces and can continue to enjoy wellness activities that enrich their quality of life."

There's Strummin' Goin' On

Members of the CSC ukelele class play Happy Birthday at the January meeting.

Submitted by Virginia Rezmierski

Familiar music, ukulele strumming, singing, and laughter are heard coming from Room 114 at the Chelsea Senior Center. This happens each Tuesday of the month from 1:30-2:30, when the Ukulele Group meets.

Started in 2017 by Gary Munce, then led by Jim Alford for 6 years, the group is now organized and led by Sarah Musko. From a membership of about 35, each week 10-15 people show up to make music together. Other people come to the Center simply to sing with the strumming and enjoy the old-time popular tunes. Occasionally, upon request, the ukulele group entertains at Senior Center events, and at locations such as Silver Maples and the St. Louis Center.

Ukuleles come in many sizes, types and qualities: soprano, concert, tenor, baritone, and bass. If you have a ukelele, you are welcome to join. For those who do not yet have a uke, there are instruments to borrow. The group also accepts donated ukuleles that are no longer being played.

Already know how to play? Come join the group! If you don't know how to play you are also welcome. Several of the members are self-taught or have learned to play in the group where simple chords are taught and members help each other. This is not a class, it's a relaxed time together where fun is the goal and you can sing or learn how to play if you want.

Did you know that strumming a ukulele can even raise your heart rate? Not exactly the same as jogging, but still good for your health, as is laughter and good fellowship. If music and fun strike a chord in your heart (pun intended) visit and join this group! You will be glad you did.

CHELSEA ATHLETICS

ON THE SIDELINE: COMFY SEATS, LONG LOST FRIENDS, DAYS GONE BY AND THE DETROIT LIONS

By Don Richter
drichter101@comcast.net

I heard there was an NFL playoff game last weekend in Detroit. What happened? Did Green Bay get snowed in and have to move their play-off game to the Motor City?

What's that you say?

The Lions actually hosted a playoff game? No way. You do mean "my" Detroit Lions, correct? Not some Lions team overseas that plays that other type of "football," right?

Nope.

THE Detroit Lions, OUR Detroit Lions, actually won an NFL playoff game last weekend. I know, I can't believe it either. I watched the game — it was amazing. I couldn't fathom what I witnessed.

What's next, little green men landing on top of the White House?

Actually, that would be pretty cool. Let me try again.

What's next, the Detroit Lions winning the Super Bowl?

There it is.

Hey, three more wins and the Lions will win the Super Bowl. I know, crazy right? I can't believe I just wrote a sentence with the "Lions" and "Super Bowl" and not be joking. These Lions actually have a chance to win a Super Bowl. Of course, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, this weekend's opponent in the NFC semifinals, might have a say in the Lions' Super Bowl chances, as will the NFL's two best teams, the San Francisco 49ers and the Baltimore Ravens.

The last time the Lions won a playoff game was in 1991, if I'm remembering correctly. I was in my mid-20s. What I do remember was watching the game with about 20 of my friends in a house in Birmingham, in suburban Detroit.

I remember prior to kickoff all of us guys in the group played a pick-up game of football out in the snow in a field behind the house. I remember playing quarterback and throwing an interception that was returned for a touchdown. I also remember redeeming myself by throwing the game-winning touchdown pass just before one of my friends' dad pulled up out of nowhere with a couple cases of, ummm, "ginger ale" for all of us to enjoy. Dads were just cooler back then, weren't they?

A few of the girls in our group arrived at the house a few minutes later with a ton of food and the party was on.

I remember everyone packing into the tiny home's living room to watch the Lions' playoff game. My buddy who owned the house had no money and even less furniture. His lone couch was filled with people sitting on the cushions, lounging on the couch's arms, sprawling on laps and laying on the back top of the over-burdened piece of furniture. Lawn chairs were opened up and sat on, random boxes or crates were brought out and, of course, the uncarpeted, hard wooden floor was always a choice of last resort.

For me? Somehow I snagged the lone random arm chair in the entire house. Sadly, my claim on the chair didn't last long because as soon as I got up to use the restroom, the arm chair disappeared beneath a sea of bodies as "floor people" clamored for a more comfortable seat. That's how it went the entire game. Every chair, every couch cushion, every crate was in play as soon as someone got up to do anything. There was no "saving" a spot. It was one big "comfy seat" free-for-all the entire playoff game. Whoever had the strongest bladder stayed the most comfortable.

I remember everyone raising the roof off that little house with yells and cheers every time the Lions scored or did something positive. Those were fun days, indeed.

I've lost track with all those guys and girls. Hopefully they're all doing well.

er. I searched for a bathing suit to wear. I no longer wear bikinis so I didn't have an appropriate suit. But, the instructions explained that Ashley, the person giving the tan is a professional and has seen plenty of naked bodies. This was a first and likely a last. I'd be going topless to get a story. When I arrived at Glow Bar which happens to be in the amazing finished basement of Ashley's house, I was met at the door by Ashley, she immediately made me feel comfortable and warm, and friendly. I followed her to the basement. She asked me if I wanted light, medium, or dark. Considering my natural state of glow-in-the-dark, white I opted for light, to be safe. I went to a changing area and took my clothes off as she prepped. I tried to put it out of my head, the lack of clothes and how little I know Ashley. It was like being a doctor's appointment.

She had me step my bare feet on what looked like the soles of flip-flops. They had adhesive and stuck to my feet. I stepped into the spray tan area. Ashley turned on a light that felt warm and a fan. She started spraying, which caused me to jump, like catching droplets from a sprinkler. Ashley explained that I should rinse the tanner off in 4-8 hours. But I knew I wouldn't be home in that window. I should have researched more before my appointment. Ashley explained that if I didn't rinse after 8 hours the tanner would not continue to darken my skin. I fear that I would turn into a Oompa Loompa if I waited too long to rinse. She assured me that I wouldn't. After we were done, I put on loose clothes and left.

Once I had time to rinse I did and was sure to follow Ashley's instructions. Without exposing my fragile skin to rays that wanted to melt and burn it, I had achieved a sunkissed glow. Ashley performed some sort of magic on my skin. I wasn't orange or streaked or strange looking and to get this shade did not require I crisp my body in lights or the sun. This was a painless, easy experience. Aside from the chill of the spray and the slightly awkward feeling of being topless in front of a stranger, it was the easiest, most perfect tan I've ever had. It is not a sun-screen but if you are going on a vacation and don't want your see-through legs to see the light of day, I encourage you to set an appointment with Ashley. It was like the magic of an Instagram filter all over my body. I did not look like a Umpaloompa. I looked like I'd just arrived back from a lovely tropical vacation without sun poisoning! I highly recommend the Glow Bar for a lovely year-round sun-kissed look. I will be back. If you're interested in an appointment, you can book through the link on the Instagram https://www.instagram.com/theglowbar_chelsea_mi/ or on Facebook <https://www.facebook.com/TheGlowBarChelseaMI> or call (734) 719-0155 or email Theglowbar10@gmail.com.

That, however, was my memory of the Detroit Lions' last playoff win until this past weekend.

This time around, I sat in my own plush, comfy recliner, in my own home watching the game.

The Lions earned a victory last weekend in their playoff win over the Los Angeles Rams.

I like to think I earned my own "victory" of sorts with the Lions' playoff win. Last weekend, I didn't have to worry about someone stealing my seat if I went to the bathroom.

It's the little victories in life that count.

United Way for Southeastern Michigan Announces Two New Grant Opportunities for Washtenaw County Nonprofits

Grants to support families in need, access to resources and equity

United Way for Southeastern Michigan has announced the opening of two significant grant opportunities for nonprofit organizations based in Washtenaw County: the 2024 Responsive Basic Needs Grant and the 2024 Racial Equity Fund Grant. These grants aim to support and empower community-focused initiatives addressing vital needs and foster racial equity in the region.

“At United Way for Southeastern Michigan, we believe in the power of unity to create lasting change. Following our merger in October of 2023, we are proud to continue our commitment to Washtenaw County families and organizations. With the launch of these grants, we are not just funding projects; we are investing in the heartbeat of our communities,” says Tonya Adair, Chief Development, Diversity & Engagement Officer at United Way for Southeastern Michigan. “We aim to support the incredible efforts of nonprofits that align with our vision of a more equitable, inclusive, and thriving Washtenaw County. Together, we can address immediate needs and lay the groundwork for systemic change, ensuring every individual can become stable and have opportunities to thrive.”

2024 Washtenaw County Responsive Basic Needs Grant - This competitive grant program targets 501(c)(3) nonprofits based in Washtenaw County with proven programs in emergency food, services for individuals who are unhoused, and benefit navigation support, including Medicaid enrollment. Funding amounts range from $15,000 to $40,000 for a six-month period. Eligible organizations, including current and prospective United Way partners, are encouraged to apply. The application period opens on January 3; the deadline for submission is 5 p.m. on January 18.

2024 Washtenaw County Racial Equity Fund Grant - Dedicated to supporting BIPOC-led organizations, the Racial Equity Fund offers unrestricted operational grants and technical assistance. This initiative aims to eliminate racial disparities and promote equitable communities in Southeastern Michigan. By prioritizing the experiences of those affected by systemic oppression, the fund seeks to foster authentic inclusion and equitable access to resources. This year, $200,000 is available for grants ranging from $10,000 to $50,000. Organizations serving and based in Washtenaw County with BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, People of Color) executive leadership are eligible. The application period is identical to the Basic Needs Grant, with applications due by 5 p.m. on January 18.

United Way for Southeastern Michigan has served the region for more than 100 years. Their mission is to mobilize the caring power of Detroit and Southeastern Michigan to improve communities and individual lives in measurable and lasting ways. They work with hundreds of partners and thousands of donors, advocates, and volunteers to advance equitable communities where households are stable, and children thrive.

They also actively work to ensure equity in communities.

Culture Creations Host Bazaar

Photos By Aimee Bingham

By Aimee Bingham
anbingham@gmail.com

January 3rd through January 7th Culture Creations hosted the fourth Annual Bazaar. I'd never attended one but I saw the event listed on Facebook and it looked like fun. According to the event page:

"It's a time to save a little money and to get something new and interesting. You can choose your own price."

The page offers a bit of advice if you're not a skilled haggler. "To properly prepare for a GOOD haggle, please search Monty Python Life of Brian- Haggle." This is what got me. I enjoy Monty Python so I followed instructions and watched a YouTube video, which, Monty Python style, made me laugh. I felt prepared to make a deal, but unsure about what was being sold and headed to the Bazaar, arriving just as it opened.

I'd been into Culture Creations during events downtown like, "Women, Wine, and Shopping," but could not slowly browse due to a child unwilling to take time and shop. I tried to prepare my daughter for haggling before we went in but the idea made her uncomfortable. She's shy so the least amount of conversation is best for her. I promised I would help her.

Upon entering the store we were greeted warmly by who I assume is Laura. She gave us a rundown of the event and explained that she uses the Bazaar to clear out space and prepare for her new product restock. The items offered had been around a while and she was ready for a change. The items in the store are interesting and cultivated from around the world. I found a ton of things I'd love to buy but after all the Christmas spending, was trying to be responsible and not get wrapped up in the idea of sale. I selected a lotus flower incense burner priced at $15. I also grabbed a pack of Lily of the Valley incense handmade in India marked $5. My daughter found soapstone-carved animals made in Africa for her brother who lived in Africa while in the Peace Corps. The entire time we shopped Laura was giving us extra details about the items we were examining. It was like a free social studies lesson while we shopped. I thoroughly enjoyed it.

My daughter's hand-carved figurines had a repair as the legs of the giraffe had been glued after breaking. My husband asked what soapstone is and Lara gladly provided a demonstration. She pulled out a bit of soapstone and allowed my daughter to carve into it. It is very soft, which is why the legs broke.

We both haggled and I started way too high in price, which Laura kindly told me, throwing me way off my haggle game. I expect people haggling to be working to rip me off. She was trying to have fun. After we were done and my inexperience shined, I ended up paying $13 total for both the incense and the burner. Laura even paid the sales tax for us! I encourage you to take some time and head into Culture Creations, and explore the treasures curated from around the world while getting to know Laura, a local treasure! Culture Creations is located at 118 Main St. Chelsea.

Reading is Rewarding at CDL!

From: Shannon Powers, Head of Information Services

Chelsea District Library (CDL) is encouraging people of all ages to grab a good book this winter through its Hot Reads for Cold Nights (HRCN) winter reading program! From increasing vocabulary, to exercising empathy, to pure entertainment, research has long supported the importance of reading for children, teens, and adults. Reading is even touted as an activity to help keep dementia at bay, according to the Fisher Center for Alzheimer's Research Foundation! There is no better time to dive into a good book than winter, and CDL has the perfect incentive to send you reaching for a book instead of a phone!

From December 18 through February 29, read, log, and review books to earn hot prizes like cocoa or tea and superhero themed mugs! HRCN uses the same reading program app as the popular summer reading program, Beanstack. If you participate in the summer program, simply open up your app and login to sign up for the HRCN winter challenge. If you've never participated, visit chelseadistrictlibrary.org/hrcn to learn how. Not a fan of reading apps? Stop by the library to participate on paper instead.

Need a book recommendation to get you started? Why not try the countywide read? Stop by CDL and grab a copy of Clint Smith's How the Word Is Passed, the Washtenaw Reads book choice for 2024. When discussions of removing confederate monuments in his hometown of New Orleans began in 2017, Smith was inspired to write this book, touted as a "brilliant, vital work" by Kirkus Reviews. Smith's book takes us around the country, highlighting historic sites and monuments such as Monticello, Galveston Island, Texas (the birthplace of Juneteenth), Confederate cemeteries, and the Whitney Plantation. Along the way, he highlights how nostalgia and miseducation have shaped our country's collective memory and understanding of race and history. Copies of How the Word Is Passed will be available starting January 3.

Detroit Manufacturing Systems Strikes Partnership with InductEV to Accelerate Adoption of High-Power Wireless Charging for Commercial Vehicles

DMS to Help InductEV Meet the Growing Demand for Wireless Charging from Fleet Owners & Operators and Port and Freight Terminals

Municipal bus approaching a wireless inductive charging pad.

Wireless commercial vehicle charging took a big step forward today with an agreement between Detroit Manufacturing Systems and InductEV. In the landmark agreement, DMS, a large-scale, U.S.-based assembly provider, will bring its operations, manufacturing, quality by design, and supply chain expertise to InductEV allowing the latter to more quickly scale to meet customer demand.

InductEV is re-inventing how electric commercial fleet vehicles charge their batteries by charging on route, using clean renewable electricity. With its wireless induction solution now deployed worldwide and with 18 patents granted and 23 in process, the King of Prussia, PA-based company is the global leader in high-power, high-speed wireless EV charging and AI-soft-ware powered energy management.

Under the terms of this agreement, DMS will:

- Manufacture InductEV's hardware, including in-ground and under-vehicle inductive pads.

- Manage InductEV's supply chain and procurement.
- Utilize engineering expertise to facilitate high quality, design for manufacturing and assembly.
- Co-develop design optimizations to prepare for a 100-fold increase in production volume.

"We couldn't be more pleased to have a manufacturing partner, known for its high standards and operating rigor, combine forces with our proprietary engineering," said Barry Libert, Chairman and CEO, InductEV. "Our complementary areas of expertise will enable us to meet the growing demand from commercial fleet owners and operators, as well as Intermodal facilities and Ports, for our advanced, AI-managed wireless charging solution."

Among its product offerings, Detroit Manufacturing Systems currently handles manufacturing for the Ford EV F-150 Lightning signaling its expertise in advanced electric vehicle components and systems production. InductEV's patented technology is currently being used in locations throughout North America and Europe, including in Washington State, Indianapolis, Martha's Vineyard, and in Gothenburg, Sweden, Volvo's hometown. (Volvo Ventures is an InductEV investor.) The company is poised to announce the largest commitment by a U.S. port facility to its wireless charging technology.

"We recognize and applaud InductEV's efforts to wirelessly electrify commercial fleets, the biggest contributor in transportation to greenhouse gas emissions worldwide," added Bruce Smith, Chairman and CEO, Detroit Manufacturing Systems. "We look forward to bringing our manufacturing, quality and supply chain expertise to this partnership and creating a successful venture that will help reduce this sector's carbon footprint at a considerable cost savings for all involved."

InductEV's proprietary, on-route wireless charging solution shifts EV charging to daytime use of renewables. It reduces the need for large EV batteries, lowering vehicle costs, and eliminates the need for recycling by extending battery life by a factor of 4-8X. Wireless charging also enables the broad deployment of autonomous vehicles.
